

Carl Zeiss
Z8929-US FS/SW

5

Abstract

10 A microscopy system allows to superimpose a light optically generated microscopic image of an object with an electronically generated image. The electronically generated image is composed of two input images, one of which is independent of optical settings of an ocular tube, such as a rotational position and a magnification thereof,
and the other input image is dependent of the optical 15 setting.